PINEOLA : CREAM : BALSAM

is excellent for all throat inflammations and for asthma. Consumptives will invariably derive benefit from its use, as it quickly abates the cough, renders expectoration easy, assisting nature in restoring wasted tissues. There is a large percentage of those who suppose their case to be consumption who are only suffering from a chronic cold or deep seated cough, often aggravated by catarrh. For catarrh use Ely's Cream Balm. Both remedies are pleasant to use. Cream Balm, 50c. per bottle: Pineola Balsam, 25c at Druggists. In quantities of $2 50 will deliver on receipt of amount.

THE PRICE OF PEACE.

BY MRS. HENRY L. PRATT.

In all my travels, from Maine to Rhode Island, I've never come across a couple more unlike than what Mr. and Mis' Nims was.

Mr. Nims was one of these shut-up-to-himself men, and he'd glum 'round for days over some little matter that a word would 'a' set right if he'd only been plain-hearted.

Mis' Nims was all the other way—talk it out and done with it; a little hasty and imprudent, maybe, but she is well-meaning, Mis' Nims is, and as good a woman to neighbor with as I want to see.

I hev thought whether or no being of different persuasions didn't work to keep 'em apart. See, she was brought up an orthodox, and he favored the Methodists. She joined with him and laid out to do her part amongst 'em, but she never was to home with the Methodists.

Then, another thing, she hated a dog, and Mr. Nims must always have a great clumsy hulk, good for nothing but to bark and eat and lie around under foot, while Mis' Nims, she marn't have even a kitten, though she set everything by a cat. And so it went.

One day I stepped in to borrow Mis' Nims' cutting-board, and just as I got to the door I heard her say: "You ain't going to turn Charley in amongst my flowers, be ye?"

He didn't condescend any reply—not as I could hear.

"Now, Mr. Nims," says she, "he's stepped on my pansy-bed and broke off a dahlia a'ready. Ain't there any other place on this whole farm where you can put him? I don't want him here," says she.

Mr. Nims' countenance didn't change more than a wooden Indian.

"I do," says he. "There's a good bating of grass to be fed down, and I calculate to leave Charley here for a spell," says he. And he budged off as stiff as though he'd swallowed a a ramrod.

Mis' Nims didn't say a word more, but she gave that old dog a push that sent him out of doors with a yelp; and I didn't blame her a mite, nuther.

I brought the cutting-board back as they was a-settin' down to dinner, and Mis' Nims asked me to draw up to the table. She had an excellent dinner—Mis' Nims is an elegant cook—but not one identical word did he speak, only to ask if I'd have another potato.

She seemed chipper enough, but I see a shadow pass over her countenance when the old horse sneezed right under the window where her piney bed was, and the dog, that had got back under the table by that time, yopped out as though somebody had accidentally trod on his tail.

Mr. Nims was a great hand for raising colts, but she was a terrible scary creature; and I expect riding after half-broken colts has given her a fit of the newralogy many's the time.

He was dreadful set in his way—same as the general run of men air—and it was like fighting the east wind to try to move him out of it. Them two used to remind me of a pair of napajawed scissors that you can't cut with. Some might have put the heft of the blame on to her; and I s'pose she did nag him some, and flash out when she'd better have kep' still.

I run in one day to borrow a sleeve pattern, when I heard Mr. Nims speaking out kind o' gruff, and I halted, for I didn't wish to intrude. (I never wear squeaky shoes myself). I didn't find out what went before, but the first I heard was this:

"I can't please you," says he. (It beat me if he'd ever tried.) "You don't like my hired men, you ain't satisfied with my breed of cows, the color of the corn barn don't suit ye, and I'm thinking you'll be happier if we divide and separate. You've always thought more of your brother Asa than you do of me, and you can be free to go to him, so you'll be well fixed."

"Why, Mr. Nims!" I heard her kind o' gasp out, and I surmised by the sound that she let fall a teacup. I looked to hear her burst out in her quick way, and I'll warrant ye he supposed she'd flare up, and that would be the end on't. But she seemed dumfounded. By 'n' by she said, quite quiet:

"I'm sure Asa would be pleased to have me there. He misses Sarah Jane, and so do the children. There has to be somebody at the head to make things so. But what would you do, Elisha?"

I had to smile, for she scarcely ever called him Elisha.

"I can look out for myself," says he, and stalked off to the barn.

I went right in, and said I guessed I could tell what was in his mind. He was calculating to make a home for his mother, and get along they two together. Old lady Nims never was any too particular, and now she had the shaking palsy. So I could see Mis' Nims set right to thinking how things would go to wrack and ruin under such no management. She is an awful nice housekeeper herself, and set a great store by her things. She made an arrant up chamber pretty soon, and was gone quite a spell. When she came down her eyes were some red, but she stuffed it out and went on as matter-of-fact as the cows coming home.

"I've got to flax around," says she, "and get Elisha's new shirt done; and there's the pickle-vinegar needs scalding, and the brine, too. And I was laying out to put up a few more quinces. Elisha is very partial to quince sauce."

The next day I went over to offer my help, and she seemed glad to have me there. I guess she felt she must let out a little to somebody, and she knows I'm no hand to run and tell. She told me they were going to Squire Hosley's to get his help about a division of the property. She wanted to wait till after Monday, so she could get one more wash done, but Mr. Nims had laid out to begin cutting corn Monday; and Saturday suited his time best. Pretty soon she said: "I hope you'll look in and do what you can to see that Elisha is comfortable," says she.

I had my thoughts, but I kep' 'em to myself, and only said I should admire to do anything I could.

Then she hushed up and said no more.

Squire Hosley's wife is second cousin to me, and she had been after me to help about her sewing. So I thought I might as well go there Saturday as any day.

The squire's office is at one side of the house, with a door opening into the orchard and another door opening into a little back room. Mis' Hosley uses this for a sewing room. So there I was. I had set the door into the office on the jar—the room being so small and close.

It was still work that I was upon, mending stockings and the children's clothes, and I couldn't help but hear all that was said in the office.

Mr. Nims made the explanation of what they wanted, and said it was understood between them that he kep' the house and farm. I'll warrant ye! I knew he'd never yield an inch of his ground. He was a man who wanted all the land joining his, and to plant in your garden.

"The bed and table stuff is hers," said he.

"Oh, no, Elisha!" says she, "I don't consent to that. Sarah Jane had a good setting-out, and Asa's house is full. Besides, if I find I need more things I can make 'em, and your mother's eyesight plagues her. She can't do as she could once," she says.

"The bed and table furnishings are hers," Mr. Nims repeated. "What she didn't make she bought with her butter money."

"No, 'Lisha," Mis' Nims began; but Squire Hosley interrupted her. I see they was beginning to wear on his patience.

"Why not put the property in two piles and draw cuts, if you've no choice. That would be fair," says he.

I knew by the way I heard her snuff that Mis' Nims hadn't give up, though she said no more—not then; but from that they went on to wrangle over every stick of furniture. She should have no use for this, that and the other thing. An' no more wouldn't he.

I could hear the squire drum on the table, and I knew he was getting restless. Finally he made an end of the talk by saying: "Why not let Mr. Nims keep the downstairs furniture, and she take what is above? How would that do?"

Well, they demurred, each one being afraid the other would be cheated, but at last, seemingly, let it go, and worked their way on to the live stock.

"Three cows for her," says he. "Two will be full and plenty for me. She was always more for a dairy than what I was," he says.

"Why, 'Lisha, you are going to make beef of old Brindle," says she, "and that leaves only four."

"I've concluded not to beef her, she is such a favorite of yours," says he.

That was a great piece of news. Mrs. Nims had felt awful cut up about having Brindle fatted and killed, for she called that cow the best for butter in the herd. But Mr. Nims appeared firm.

"And the pigs," he began. "I don't want any pigs! I've no use for 'em. What can I do with pigs down to Baker street?"

And she burst out crying. She had set a good deal by that litter of pigs, bringing 'em up by hand, as you might say, for the old mother died when they were eight days old.

After that it was still as death for a minute, then Squire Hosley spoke up.

"My good friends," says he, "if you can't agree about living apart, my best advice is that you agree to go on living together."

For a minute or two all was still again, and the old clock ticked up like the Day of Judgment. By 'n' by Mr. Nims spoke rather low:

"What do you say, Louisy?"

"I was thinking whether we hadn't oughter drive over to your mother's and see how her cough is. I'm some worried about that cough," says she.

"I'm agreeable to that," says he.

As I was leaning forward, I caught sight through the crack of the door of him mopping up his face with his old red handkerchief; so I see he had felt it some. Squire Hosley, he said nothing.

Well, I made my way home middling early, and was keeping a watchout as they driv into the yard betwixt sundown and dark, and I see her stop and pat the yellow dog that was flopping his tail on the top step of the piazza. Old Bose was so tickled that he jumped 'round as graceful as a cow; and I knew by the looks of the back of Mr. Nims' neck that he took it in. After awhile I made an arrant to carry over a dish of Dutch cheese, and there they were, eating their supper as cheerful as a basket of chips.

"Set up and have a cup o' tea," says she. "We've had quite a ride this afternoon," says she. "We've been to see Mother Nims, and Elisha drove 'round by the bridge. It is all of a mile further, but he knows how skittish I be about crossing the ferry in Uncle Seth's old scow. I'm silly, I s'pose. Elisha and I, we think mother is getting too old and feeble to live alone, and we have about persuaded her to break up and come to us."

She run on for a spell, but that was all she said concerning their arrangements. And—would you believe it?—from that day to this Mis' Nims has never opened her mouth to me on the subject, though she knows I never repeat. And now, to see them two jogging 'round together after old Charley, as content as ducks in a millpond, nobody mistrusts it took e'ena'most a separation to unite them.

Nobody knows but me and the old squire. It won't get out from him—he is as close-mouthed as a fish. And I was never one to talk.—Outlook.

THE STAGE.

SAINT SAENS is said to have composed a humorous fantasie zoologique entitled "La Carnival des Animaux."

"GUERNICA," an opera by Paul Vidal, on an episode of the Carlist insurrection in the Basque provinces in 1873, has been brought out with great success at the Paris Opera Comique.

A HOME of Rest, "where tired actors may recuperate," to be supported entirely by the dramatic profession has just been started in England with Beerbohm Tree for its president.

KARL REINECKE, who for thirty-five years has been director of the famous Gewandhaus concerts at Leipsig and professor of the piano in the conservatory, is seventy-one years old, and wishes to resign his office.

MME. BERNHARDT has been asked how it is that she wears so well. The answer she gives is that she never thinks. She plays to her finger tips. Her life is acting. Reflection she leaves to the dreamers. "It is thought that wears one out."

JUSTICE JACKSON'S TERM.

Next to the Shortest in the History of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Jackson's service of two years on the supreme bench of the United States is one of the shortest terms in the history of the court. The only shorter term was that of Justice Harrison, who was appointed in 1789 and resigned the office in the same year to become chancellor of his native state, Maryland. Chief Justice Rutledge, the only man to be twice appointed to the supreme bench, says the New York Sun, resigned the office of associate justice in 1791, after two years of service, to become chief justice of South Carolina. He was named chief justice of the United States supreme court in 1795, and presided one term, but the nomination was rejected by the senate because it was discovered that his mind had become impaired. Associate Justice Trimble, of Kentucky, died in 1828 after two years of service. These are the only justices whose terms have been as short as that of Justice Jackson, save one of his associates, still upon the bench.

The longest terms were those of Chief Justices Marshall and Story, each of whom served thirty-four years. Five others served over thirty years, five between twenty-five and thirty, six between twenty and twenty-five, nine between fifteen and twenty, six between ten and fifteen, seventeen between five and ten, and eight less than five years. Some of those included in this summary are still upon the bench. Justice Field, appointed in 1863, is the oldest in point of service of the present bench, and his term approaches the the longest in the history of the court.

RATHER ABSENT MINDED.

The Professor Thought the Under Pie Crust Was a Little Tough.

A certain one of our scientific men—a man whom you can't help knowing if you have had much business with the Smithsonian institution—has the reputation of being extremely absent-minded, says the Washington Star. I don't believe most of the stories they tell about him, but here is one on whose truth I am willing to stake my best bonnet. He's a married man, this scientific person, and his wife is a good housekeeper. She is an excellent cook, too, but she prefers to buy most of her pastry ready made. She bought a pie the other day, a juicy pie, a blueberry pie, in fact. All day long it lay on the pantry shelf in one of those thin pasteboard plates bakery pies always come in. Its juice gradualy soaked through the lower crust—you know how blueberry pies do—and when the lady of the house—that is to say, the cook—put it on the dinner table, the pasteboard plate went with it. The scientific man's wife cut the pie, and to make the handling of it easier, cut the pasteboard plate, too. The scientific man took his slice of pie and ate it meditatively. His wife kept silence. He ate the top crust and the blueberries and the bottom crust and the pasteboard slice till he had eaten about half. Then his look of inward contemplation gradually changed to surprise, and then to mild distress.

"My dear," he said, looking up, "isn't this under crust just a little tough?"

SPLICED A SNAKE.

Singular Result of a Surgeon's Experiment in Grafting Reptiles.

Dr. G. A. Countryman, of Mellette, S. D., possesses a combination snake, says the Minneapolis Journal. It is half garter and half sand snake, and this peculiar composition was made possible by a surgical operation performed by a doctor. His attention was directed to snakes from observing that when a snake is killed its tail appears to live until the sun goes down, when life ceases. It is thought by many that this is owing to the nerves, but the doctor was somewhat skeptical on this point. Being a surgeon he dissected several and made some interesting discoveries. He found that in both the sand and garter snakes the spinal column extended little more than half the length of the body. Knowing that it was possible to graft flesh, this led him to chloroform them and try splicing them, making the splice, of course, below the end of the spinal column. He made four unsuccessful attempts, but succeeded in the fifth. The grafted snake he has now is apparently in good health and the joined parts are perfectly knitted together. Its body is of the sand snake and its tail is a garter snake's. The sand snake is spotted and looks exactly like a rattlesnake, while the garter snake is striped and its color is of the different shades of green and yellow. Both of these varieties of snakes are harmless and common throughout the slate.

Saved by a Dog.

A large Newfoundland dog saved a boy's life at Baltimore recently. The boy is eight years old, and the dog, formerly a tramp, is now well cared for. The boy and the dog were romping on the dock in the morning, when the boy accidentally fell overboard. There are twenty feet of water in the dock. The big Newfoundland saw the boy fall, and just as he came to the surface sprang into the dock and swam to the fast sinking boy. The boy clutched the woolly hair on the dog's neck, which kept him afloat, and then the dog started to swim with his burden to the other side of the dock. A man rushed to the rescue and when the dog reached the place jumped into a rowboat and managed to pull both the dog and the boy out of the water. The dog became a hero in the eyes of the people who had been attracted to the scene and he was given a first-class dinner for his heroism.

M'DOUGALL'S CONVERSION

BY BELLE FIELD.

"What!"

The astonishment in the word was simply indescribable, as Harry McDougall dropped his paper and regarded his cousin in dignified amazement.

A prettier cousin than usual she was just then, her blue eyes and pink cheeks a little bluer and pinker, as she viewed her surprised relative, who soon found voice to remonstrate:

"Do you mean to say that you, whose sole ambition should be the enhancing of woman's chief virtue, retiring modesty, are really proposing to enter my mill as bookkeeper? If so, you are either very ignorant of what would be expected of you in that capacity or you are forgetting what is due your own womanhood. Henrietta McDougall, I am ashamed of you!"

The subject of this tirade merely gave her decided chin a little lift, and made answer:

"You need not flatter yourself that you are going to extinguish me with your heroics, Harry, for I most certainly do intend to go into an office even if the shock should prove serious to your conservative organization. As you refuse my offer, I shall take a position with the Big Salt Lumber company; but I thought it would be pleasant to work with you."

The young man cleared his throat two or three times before he found voice for expostulation.

"But, Henrietta, it is not a woman's place. Contact with men in business life disarms woman of her best weapon, and withal her greatest charm. She wrecks her own matrimonial chances; for, you see, when men marry, they do not choose the girls who have thrust themselves forward, but tie for life to the home girl. Then, too," continued he, with a touch of pomposity, "woman's brain is of such different caliber that she is never a success in the business world. While I esteem you very highly as a friend and cousin, I could not give you a place in my office. I must have the broader outlook of a man, and do not feel that I could trust any woman with such a responsible position as that held by my bookkeeper."

This time there was no mistaking the real indignation in the girl's face and voice.

"Harry, I should be very angry with your insinuations, but I really only pity one who holds such warped views. I want you to understand that girls nowadays are not compelled to go about on tiptoe and with bated breath for fear of spoiling their matrimonial chances. Talk about trustworthiness! Who absconds with the employer's money? Not the woman. Talk about the 'broader outlook!' Wait until your cross-eyed bookkeeper goes to South America with the contents of your safe, and you will wish you had one of the untrustworthy women in his place."

"Don't let us quarrel, my dear," patronized Harry, "for I did not wish to offend you. I was shocked that you, so young, so pretty, wished to do man's work."

"It is not man's work, Harry," said the girl, quickly. "Work is classified according to its excellence, and not the sex of the worker. But there is no use in arguing with you," turning to leave the room. "On second thought," and she paused on the threshold, "let me predict that you will fall hopelessly in love with one of this very class of women, marry her, and become a thorough convert to the idea of women in business."

"Marry a creature of that stamp? Not until I become an imbecile. I shall marry for a companion; a woman who will know her sphere and keep it."

Harry McDougall was not at heart an intolerant man, but his whole life environment had been conservative in the highest degree.

His residence in the west had been but short, and he was daily surprised at the freedom accorded women about him. He marveled at the unconsciousness with which business men accepted into their precincts the entrance of business women, and abhorred, through ignorance of the thought of the times, their "intrusion," as he called it.

But a few months before young McDougall had come to Kansas from Connecticut to take charge of a flouring mill lately purchased by his father, a property situated in a small town some thirty miles west of Elliston, Henrietta's home.

The business was prospering, and prosperity does not make an intolerant man tolerant; so upon his visits to Elliston his altercations with Henrietta had become more spirited, culminating in the application by the girl for position as bookkeeper in his mill, and his pompous refusal of it.

The next morning, before breakfast, a telegram informed Harry that his father had been the victim of an accident in the old mill at home, and desired the immediate presence of his son. He had barely time to write instructions to his bookkeeper, placing necessary funds at his disposal, before the next train for the east.

"What a pity you did not accept my offer of yesterday," said Henrietta, jokingly, as they stood beside the waiting train. "Just think how well I could have taken care of your interests during your absence."

"Pouff!" ejaculated Harry, with exaggerated contempt. "When I want a shortage in my accounts, I will employ women to manage my affairs."

But no sooner had he taken up the familiar duties at home than the distracting news came from the west that his trusted bookkeeper (Henrietta's detestation), had left suddenly, with the contents of the safe.

The young man's state of mind can be imagined. His father was not yet out of danger, and, even had he been, the business required him to stay in the east. His money—a considerable sum—was gone, the mill was not running, and orders already in could not be filled. It meant ruin for him.

After several days of distracted writing and telegraphing, he received a letter from Elliston, which ran:

"MR. HENRY MCDOUGALL.—Dear Sir: I have visited your mill, looked over the premises, examined the books, and, if satisfactory to you, am willing to take charge of the business during your absence, advancing the necessary money. This, providing you will sell me a one-half interest in the property, at the price asked by the former owner, and will accept the money I shall advance as part purchase money.

"Awaiting your decision, I am

"Very truly yours, D. P. BOARDMAN."

His first sense was one of relief, followed by wonderment. David Boardman was senior member of the firm owning one of the largest mills in Elliston, and his check could be drawn for a larger amount than that of any other man in the city. What could he want, Harry asked himself, with an interest in a mill in a little country town, where such a financial disaster had occurred as had happened to his own business?

But the letter was evidently in good faith, and Harry telegraphed his acceptance immediately, knowing that a partnership with Mr. Boardman would insure his future.

In the intervening time his partner had not only made up the loss the business had sustained, but had brought profits higher than ever before. Mr. Boardman had remained constantly on the ground, however, but had signified his intention of returning to Elliston as soon as Harry returned.

A farmer drove past Harry, as he walked to the mill. He could not stop his loaded wagon on the river bank, but he called out cheerily:

"Glad ter see yer back, Mr. McDougal. Mighty fine partner o' yours in thar!"

With a light heart, Harry pushed open the office door, then stopped, aghast! He saw, busily writing at the desk, not the bent form of David Boardman, but a young lady. For a moment he stood staring at the trimly-attired figure and sleek, dark head. There a low, yet decisive voice said:

"Were there any letters for us tonight, John?"

Before Harry could frame a reply, the young woman, turning, met his gaze. She rose and advanced, a trifle of color coming to her cheek, yet her demeanor cool and unruffled, and asked:

"I beg your pardon, sir. I thought it was the janitor. Is there anything I can do for you?"

Harry pulled himself together and replied:

"I should like to see Mr. Boardman."

The girl looked puzzled for a moment, then answered:

"I fear you have made a mistake. Mr. Boardman lives in Elliston, the next town east."

"I certainly can have made no mistake," returned Harry, decidedly. "I have letters in my pocket dated at this place, and settling the details of a transaction by which he becomes part owner of this property."

"Mr. Boardman certainly has no interest here," stated his informant. "I am Miss Boardman, and have bought half this mill, which I am managing until Mr. McDougall arrives from the east."

For an instant Harry felt as though he were on a toboggan slope several miles long, not knowing where the end might be; but he pulled himself together and handed the lady one of his cards.

At sight of the piece of pasteboard the young lady looked wonderstruck, and again flushed a trifle. Then she looked up, and ventured:

"And you thought—"

"Yes, I thought so," he answered, comprehensively. "But I am so bewildered now that I am past all thinking. Will you please explain some things that I cannot understand?"

Within a few moments Harry discovered that instead of selling an interest in his mill to Mr. David P. Boardman, he had delivered it over to a Philistine in the person of Dorothy P. Boardman, the aforesaid gentleman's niece and junior partner, that she, having extra funds on her hands, and hearing of McDougall's trouble, had felt sorry for him, investigated, found that the investment would be a good one, and made him an offer.

She had not intended to deceive him, but had merely signed her name as she was in the habit of doing in her business relations, without dreaming of being confused with her uncle, not taking into account Harry's short residence in the state.

It was astonishing to see how readily the young man reconciled himself to having for a partner this young, businesslike woman, with the bright eyes and quiet voice.

Miss Boardman went back to Elliston at once, and Harry took up his work alone. His bookkeeper was never found, perhaps because the amount of his embezzlement was not large enough to make much stir, but Henrietta said it was because of his "broader outlook."

That young lady also made frequent remarks about the number of times that Harry found it necessary to seek his partner's advice, and her triumph was complete when, a few months after the first partnership was consummated, Dorothy Boardman, upon much persuasion, consented to enter into another partnership with the house of McDougall, the papers to be made out for life.

All this was five years ago. Now the little country station threatens to be quite a town, and Harry's prosperity has grown along with it. He gives his wife credit for his prosperity, as for his happiness, and has come to glory in having married one of the class once so obnoxious to him.

David Boardman McDougall, aged three, is, in spite of his long name, quite the most intelligent child in existence, so his parents aver, and Henrietta McDougall is head bookkeeper in her cousin's mill, having come to see the working out not only of her hopes but of her prophecy.—N. Y. Ledger.

False Economy.

Current Notes reports the significant saying of an old lady who was locally famous for her good health and her exceeding thrift. An acquaintance was congratulating her upon her freedom from bodily ailments, when she replied. "We be pretty well for old folks, Josiah and me. Josiah hasn't had an ailin' time for fifty years, 'cept last winter. And I ain't never suffered but one day in my life, and that was when I took some of the medicine Josiah had left over, so's how it shouldn't be wasted."

DANGEROUS LAKES.

Mysterious Submarine Currents in Some of the Northern Waters.

Little Shuswap lake is stated to have a flat bottom, with a depth varying from fifty-eight to seventy-four feet, measured from the mean high water mark. The deepest water found in the Great Shuswap, says the Vancouver World, was five hundred and fifty-five feet, about six miles northward from Cinnemousun narrows, in Seymour arm, though the whole lake is notably deep. Adams lake, however, exceeds either of the Shuswaps, as its average depth for twenty miles is upward of one thousand one hundred feet, and at one point a depth of one thousand nine hundred feet was recorded. In the northwest corner of this lake, at a depth of one thousand one hundred and eighteen feet, the purpose of the scientific explorers was defeated by the presence of mysterious submarine currents, which played with the sounding line like some giant fish and prevented any measurement being taken. It is a complete mystery how the currents could have been created at this depth, and scientific curiosity will, no doubt, impel either public or private enterprise to send a second expedition to the scene this summer to endeavor to solve the riddle. As the height of the surface of this lake is one thousand three hundred and eighty feet above the sea level its present bed is, therefore, only one hundred and ninety feet above the sea, although distant two hundred miles from the nearest part of the ocean. Dr. Dawson and his associates believe that the beds of some of the mountain lakes in the region are many feet lower than the sea level.

THE people of Cambria county have never had a more efficient or more accommodating and obliging public servant than Daniel A. McGough. He should by all means be re-elected.

CLEARFIELD township's 175 Democratic voters, and the 125 faithful in Chest will see not a man of them fail to vote the whole ticket on November 5th. This is no time to stay at home.

WILLIAM S. O'BRIEN is a graduate of Duff's Business college, Pittsburg. Though he started in life and worked for six years as a coal miner and lost both legs in an accident on the railroad, he has still managed to work his way up. Vote for him, and give a deserving and competent man your help.

IF last year and the year before there were any Democrats who hesitated about going to the polls, the open debauchery and corruption of the Hastings legislature, should call them to a sense of their duty to the public. Any man with a spark of patriotism in him must certainly feel a sense of resentment at the shameful record. Assert your manhood and vote against the ticket set up by the rings that stood back of these rascals.

MANY claim that the tariff question is one which they cannot understand. Here are the results of the two latest laws on that subject which all can comprehend! Under McKinleyism business was depressed wages reduced and hundreds of thousands of men thrown out of employment. Under tariff reform business has been revived, wages increased and employmeut furnished all idle men. Persons who don't understand the details of those laws can at least see what has followed their operation. The McKinley act was a Republican law; tariff reform is a Democratic measure. The former produced a general blight; the latter has proved a universal blessing.

UNITED STATES SENATOR QUAY is actively pushing his boom for Republican national chairman. He lets no chance go by to keep the name of Matthew Stanley Quay before the people, and, as usual, is ready to sacrafice all others to attain this end. His champion is the Philadelphia Inquirer, and while that paper does not publish one editorial in favor of the Republican state ticket it gives columns to Quay and his schemes. His latest scheme was promulgated from Washington in the form of an interview, in which he explodes a plan to raise $40,000,000 by increasing the import duties on woolen and other goods. He says he will do great things in the way of harbor improvements, etc., if the tariff is increased. Here is another instance of "the people be d——d," for he wants to increase the duties on woolens and increase the cost of goods to our people. It is a great play for increased popularity, but it will hardly work, as the people are satisfied to pay low prices for good clothing, and will not willingly return to high prices and low wages.

IN looking over the list of Democratic candidates for superior court judges, we find that no better selection could have been made as to location in order to give the new bench the experience that is required in such an important post. Hon. O. P. Bechtel, reared and living all his life in Schuylkill county, the richest district of the anthracite coal region, and Hon. P. P. Smith, holding a prominent position in Lackawanna county, the northern end of the anthracite district, give to the bench that experience in the coal business that is indispensible in any high court. No section in the country brings a greater volume of business to the legal profession than the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania, and it is only proper that it should be well represented on the bench. In Hon. James S. Moorehead, of Westmoreland, and Hon. Christopher Magee, of Allegheny, our vast fields of bituminous coal and the great iron industries of Western Pennsylvania find representatives who cannot be equalled anywhere. Hon. Charles H. Noyes comes from Warren county, which is up in the northern belt, and, therefore, that region has secured a wise and learned candidate. The farmers in the southern portion of the state have Harman Yerkes, of Bucks county as their typical representative. Could a fairer distribution of candidates been made? Could a more experienced ticket have been placed before the people of Pennsylvania? We do not think so, and we believe that the people are wise enough to cast their ballots for the whole ticket.

IN his speech in Philadelphia last Saturday, our candidate for state treasurer, Hon. B. F. Meyers, said:

"The rapid return of the country to prosperous conditions promises sufficient revenues. At any rate an election at which only a state treasurer and seven judges of a superfluous court are to be chosen can hardly be expected to determine the question whether or not a revision of the tariff should be had. True it is that the changes are being rung on this question by our political adversaries. Even the transcendent splendor of Senator Quay's civil service reform programme is not permitted to dazzle the eyes of the Republican saints so as to blind them to the great importance of saving McKinleyism by the election of a machine-made candidate for state treasurer. Nay, the unspeakable virtues of the Lexow committee, whose grand and glorious purpose seems to get such information for the use of the next legislature as will have the effect of deterring that body from changing the name of this city to Martinsburg, is postponed until after election, lest, indeed, the calcium light which is to flash upon the precincts of the City of Brotherly Love might so affect the optics of the regulation Republican voter that he would get his cross mark into the wrong column for state treasurer on the Australian ballot."

AN esteemed contemporary very briefly and aptly sums up the political situation in the following paragraph:

The fact that the Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania polled 464,200 votes in 1890, and was elected by a majority of 16,554, shows that there are enough Democrats and Independents in the state to turn the usual Republican majority upside down whenever they are so minded; and they are never so apt to be so minded as in an off year, and in the peculiar political situation now prevailing in Pennsylvania. Aside from any question of factional division in the Republican ranks, the fact is undeniable that among the more thoughtful Republicans of both factions there is undercurrent of dissatisfaction upon various accounts, and notably because of the profligacy of the legislature of 1895, the wanton creation of useless offices, and above all, the flagrant wrong of the state administration in attempting to pack the superior court and make it a helplessly partisan arm of the state judiciary. This is an abuse which grates upon the better instincts of those Republicans who do their own thinking; and it is most likely effect will will be to swell the Independent vote for the Democratic superior court ticket."

IT is significant that, notwithstanding the assertions of himself and his organs, Matthew Stanley Quay does not think that the Republican party ticket is going to win by anything like the party majority, let alone such an extraordinary vote as it polled last fall. He has come to Philadelphia with a large army of camp followers, henchmen and confidential clerks, and is working for a state victory harder and more persistently than he did when he was national chairman of his party. In fact Mr. Quay plainly sees the day of his political decline and the sunset of his career as on alleged statesman.

This is his last supreme struggle for the boss ship of his party and he is sacrificing everything to maintain his hold. He is like unto the monster of the Northern ocean, who, pierced by the spears of many brave whalers, lashes the sea and in its fury makes a vain endeavor to destroy his enemies and regain his liberty. So Quay, who though himself invulnerable, has found himself mortally wounded by the lancers of the respectable portion of his party, and yet tries to crush them with his waning political power.

THE Democrats of White, and the Mountain districts of Reade, Dean, Gallitzin township, Cresson, Washington and Portage township, numbering in all over 1000, have all seen the Republican prediction of disaster refuted by plenty of work in the mines, and good markets for farm products. They will be out in force on Tuesday next to rebuke the party of false predictions.

THERE are 76 voting precincts in Cambria county; a loss or gain of one vote in each district might be sufficient to determine the result. Let not one Democrat remain at home.

Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 25th, 1895.—President Cleveland found on his return from Atlanta that although the season for the propagation of cabinet resignations was a little late in opening it had been working overtime to catch up. He learned for the first time that a disagreement existed between himself and Secretary Olney of such a serious nature that the latter was going to retire from the cabinet, and that it was on account of that disagreement that Mr Olney did not accompany him to Atlanta. This might have been very distressing to him, if he had not known that it was because he would have to go to Atlanta a little later on with the foreign representatives to take part in the exercises of Diplomatic Day at the exposition, and the pressing nature of some private business in Boston, that prevented Secretary Olney going with him.

The president presided over a cabinet meeting to-day, but there was nothing said or done which implied in the slightest degree any disagreement over the position of this government in dealing with the dispute between England and Venezuela. From the first the president and every member of the cabinet have held the same opinion on this matter, and they still do. While not pretending to speak for the president or the members of his cabinet, it can be said that many prominent Democrats believe the current stories about disagreements and intended resignations are circulated for the purpose of trying to goad the administration into declaring what it will do in case England should resort to force to carry its point in Venezuela, and that some of the circulators have benefitted at the expense of the English secret fund. Be that as it may, the administration has no idea of showing its hand to England at this stage of the game. Its position has been fully determined upon and will be announced it will be approved by a great majority of our people, if not by all of the president's political opponents.

A very small thing is needed in Washington to start a very big sensation. One of the very smallest of these small things was the order for continuous work on the guns which are being made in the government gun shop, for the new battle ship Oregon, now lying at the Mare Island navy yard waiting the completion of her armament. This order was made the foundation for a string of the most outrageous stories as to the administration's hurried preparations for the inevitable war with England and similar rot. The truth was easily obtainable, if it had been wanted. The order for continuous work was issued by the navy department for no other purpose than to have the guns ready at the stipulated time in order to prevent the throwing of any blame for delay on the department by the contractor. By working three eight-hour shifts three days work are accomplished on the guns every 24 hours. How very warlike these preparations are may be seen from the size of the working shifts—one foreman, four machinists, one engineer, one fireman, and two laborers to each.

It is, of course, known that President Cleveland is and will be a very busy man until after his message to congress is completed, but there is one thing that all the Democrats hereabouts would like him to take time enough to do. That is to dismiss the negro, Taylor, who is recorder of deeds for the district of Columbia. Taylor claims to have been a Democrat before he came to Washington, but his rascalities have been much more marked than his Democracy since he secured one of the best local positions in Washington, and this week he attended a negro Republican mass meeting and made a speech in favor of a negro Republican being elected as one of the delegates to the national Republican conventon. Since then every Democrat one meets expresses the wish that President Cleveland would kick Taylor out of the office to which he appointed him.

Secretary Carlisle proposes to set a good example by going all the way to Covington, Ky., to register in order that he may be able to cast his vote for the straight Democratic ticket in that state.

The stoppage of the coinage of silver has no bearing whatever upon the silver question. The only silver that has been coined for sometime has been worn and mutilated silver. The appropriation for that purpose for the current fiscal year having been exhausted Secretary Carlisle directed that the mint at New Orleans be closed and the employes furloughed until such time as coinage may be resumed. It is probable that the question of the coina e of the 137,644,000 ounces of silver bullion which the government now has on hand, remaining from the purchases made under the Sherman law, will be referred to congress. Should congress order this silver to be coined the government would make a profit of almost $54,000,000 on it, that being about the difference between its cost and the amount of silver dollars it could be coined into. Ineffectual attempts were made to get the last congress to authorize this coinage.

A Banker's Horrible Death.

Chicago, October 30.—G. W. Cole, president of the Bankers and Merchant's association, was run over and fatally injured last night by a cable car. Mr. Cole stepped into the street to take a car, and did not notice one bearing down on him from the opposite direction. He foiled to get on the one he had intended to take and was knocked down by the other.

He was dragged under the wheels, and his body was mangled in a horrible manner. It was necessary to send for a wrecking crew before his body could be extracted. Mr. Cole was taken to a hospital, where he died in a short time.

Hazing May Cause a Death.

Logansport, Ind., October 26.—A. M. Gifford, coacher of the foot ball team, and two students of Michaels university, attempted last night to haze Theodore Vera, son of Col. Vera, of Custer City, Pa. Disguised and masked, they suddenly came upon Vera, with pistols presented. The young man ran into the college, terror-stricken, screaming murder.

Miss Mary Jennings, of the college, became so frightened at his cries that she fell unconscious to the floor. She has not yet recovered consciousness, and her recovery is doubtful.

Six Hundred Killed.

Cologne, October 26. A native of Cologne, who is employed on board the Austrian Lloyd steamship Venus, has sent a letter to the Cologne Gazette from Trebizand giving details as an eye witness of the recent massacre at Trebizond. The letter is dated October 8. The writer says that at least 600 Armenians were slaughtered, while only five turks were killed. The Armenian settlements were set on fire and the inhabitants burned to death.

More Armenian Outrages.

Constantinople, October 29. Another massacre of Armenians, accompanied by the outraging of women, is reported to have occurred recently at Baibut, between Erzerum and Trebizond. According to the report received here a mob of about 500 Mussulmans and Lazes, the great majority of whom were armed with rifles, made an attack upon the Armenians inhabiting several villages of that vicinity and set fire to their houses and schools.

When the Armenians fled from their dwellings they were shot down as they ran and a number of men and women who were captured by the rioters were fastened to stakes and burned alive. The Armenian women who fell into the hands of the mob were outraged and mutilated. The churches were desecrated and the villages attacked were pillaged, the cattle and all the portable property of any value belonging to the Armenians being carried off by the rioters During the disturbance 150 Armenians are said to have been killed.

The surviving villagers applied to the governor of Baibut for protection, and he, after hearing their complaint, sent three policemen to the scene of the massacre, after the slaughter was ended. The Turkish officials, it is claimed know the ring leaders of the outbreak, but no steps have been taken to arrest them.

The Turks, it is stated, have also attacked the Armenians in the district of Gumushdagh, near Trebizond, and killed many of them.

The number of Armenians massacred at Erzengan is now said to be several hundred.

Will Adopt a New Plan.

Bellefonte, Pa., October 28.—Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John Hamilton will this year inaugurate a new plan of holding the farmer's institutes throughout the state over that formerly in vogue. Instead of holding just two institutes in a county, lasting two days each, he proposes to hold four institutes of one day each, and thus hopes to be able to impart an additional interest as well as give instruction to a much larger percentage of farmers than has heretofore been the case.

The department proposes, in addition to the allotment of money furnished each county, to aid the local management by providing, free of expense, outside help, the visiting workers to be present one day, and then proceed to the next place and thus throughout the entire state. If the local managers think it advisable, they have the privilege of continuing the institute as long as they see fit.

Mr. Hamilton also makes the suggestion that the institutes be held in the small towns and villages, rather than in the larger towns, and as a better means of reaching the larger class of people for whom the help is designed. And he urges that the local management secure home talent and induce them to think out and put in presentable shape important problems in agriculture that need investigation and solution. Thus, he believes, the object of the farmers' institutes will be more readily and nearly attained than by the reading of and discussing scientific papers that half the farmers cannot understand.

Philadelphia, October 28.—On returning from his tour of inspection over the Pennsylvania railroad President Roberts said:

"There has been a remarkable improvement in business in both the East and West during the past few months, and the winter gives promise of a still greater increase in activity in all directions. The renewal of prosperity was striking, especially in the West, where the farmers have had an unusually large corn crop. Our road has been greatly improved in every respect since the last annual inspection, but still there is always opportunity for improvement. On the eastern system, the principal work contemplated is a continuation of the division and straightening of the lines. We propose to take out more of the curves, and in fact all that we possibly can. In the West we will lengthen our double track and add to the equipment in various ways. We have ordered 6,000 freight cars, which will be built and delivered during the year."

Quay Stands by Reed.

Philadelphia, October 28—Senator Quay returned from Washington to-day. He was asked if the reports sent out from New York that he favored Reed for president were true, and he said they were. When asked if McKinley was his second choice, Mr. Quay replied: "McKinley or some other suitable candidate, but it is too early yet to tell who will be the strongest candidate. That will depend on the choice of some of the other states, New York, for instance."

"But, Mr. Quay, it was sent out from New York that Platt favored Reed with you."

"Well, he didn't tell me that," answered Mr. Quay, and then the junior senator from Pennsylvania ceased talking.

Mails Fed The Flames.

Harrisburg, October 25.—The loss of valuable mail matter in the wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad near Newport yesterday was very large. Chief Clerk Gore, of the railway postal service, says that only 31 of the 125 or more registered letters in transit for Indiana, Indian Territory, Illinois, New Mexico, Arizona, Louisville and Nashville R. P. O. Kansas City, Denver and Cincinnati were saved. All the paper mail for these places and all the letter mail, estimated at about 50,000 letters, was lost Of the register pouches burned, four were from New York and one from Harrisburg for Chicago. These pouches were exceedingly valuable.

The Williamsport Fires.

Williamsport, October 30.—four incendiary fires here early this morning caused a total loss of about $10,000 At the Raddix mill there were two fires and 100,000 feet of pine and hemlock were destroyed, entailing a loss of $1,500. About $600 will cover the loss of many thousand bundles of lath in the Strong, Deemer & Co.'s yard. The fire at Mehaffey & Co.'s kindling wood factory was the fiercest. Over four acres of bundled wood was consumed. The loss at this yard is about $8,000, with no insurance. The firemen worked from one o'clock until eight o'clock this morning before the flames were gotten under control.

When the Chill Mists of the Morning

Hang like a pall over the surface of the earth, it will be well for you before venturing into the raw vaporous air, charged, perhaps, with the seeds of malaria or provocative of rheumatic twinges, to take a wineglassful of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and thus shield yourself from atmospheric influences threatening to health. If you happen to get snowed, sleeted or rained upon, use the same preventative, and avoid the rheumatism, or a dangerous cold. The agreeable warmth infused into the circulation by this genial stomachic, its invigorating and regulating properties commend it to all appreciative of the fact that prevention is better than cure. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, biliousness, nervousness and kidney trouble, sick headache and debility.

—Reports from the regions about Bellefonte and the Seven Mountains say that game has never been so plentiful in 10 years. This is especially true in the case of wild turkeys, which are found on both sides of the Bald Eagle Valley in large flocks. Deer are also quite plentiful in the mountains.

—Thieves entered a house belonging to Phil H. Jones, in Jackson township, on Saturday and carried off a lot of butter, cheese, canned goods, sugar coffee, apple butter, etc. This is the second time they have visited Mr. Jones' premises and he proposes to make it hot for them if he gets his eyes on them.

—The Pennsylvania Company is determined that an immediate end must be put to the possibility of suits arising from injuries sustained by employees who are under age. A few days ago nine young men under 21, who were working for the company on work trains, were peremptorily discharged. It is given out that this rule is to be strictly enforced throughout the entire system in the future.

—While Mrs. Patrick Dolan, of Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland county, was hanging up the clothes, which she had just finished washing, her baby boy fell out of the door into a tub of soapsuds and was not discovered until life was almost extinct. —In the United States district court on Tuesday at Pittsburg, Lewis H. Snyder, of New Washington, Clearfield county, was convicted of sending obscene letters through the mails to Hula Stiffler, the 13-year-old daugter of a farmer residing near New Washington. The letters that were produced in evidence were of the vilest description and were not read in open court, but were given to the jury for perusal.

—On Monday Mr. W. A. Hanna, Monseytown, Lycoming county, found two of his yearling calves dead in one of the fields on his farm some distance from the barn. The calves had been killed by some animal and torn to pieces. The condition of the yearlings indicated that a bear might have killed them, but Mr. Hanna thinks they were killed by dogs. One of the calves was a thoroughbred and was very valuable.

—The barn of Alexander Cover, in Conemaugh township, caught fire on Tuesday and together with its contents, including all of this season's harvest, was destroyed. A large amount of farming implements, machinery, harness, etc., was also consumed. It is supposed the fire originated from some children playing with matches. The loss is estimated at $2,500, with no insurance, the insurance policy which Mr. Cover carried having expired a few days ago.

—Louis Balstion, a Swedish miner employed at Greenwich, Clearfield county, was struck by an engine going east, while walking on the track near McGarvey on Friday. The engine stopped, picked him up and took him to Altoona and he was conveyed to the hospital in the ambulance. At that institution examination revealed that, aside from abrasion of the face and forehead, he was not much injured. Balstion was visibly intoxicated when taken to the hospital.

—The Gosling, in an item on ballot printing, leads its readers to believe that we "scooped $1,800 for ballot printing which the Mountaineer afterwards charged only $222.50 for." We have no disposition to thresh old straw over, but we have a distinct recollection of offering the Gosling more than double that amount if it furnished us with the same amount and quality of blank paper that we used in the ballot printing job. The Gosling's readers, perhaps, have no memory.

—Six double tenement houses occupied by employes of the Sterling Coal company, at Hastings, and owned by the company, were destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning. The fire originated from a defective flue and owing to the combustible nature of the building it rapidly succumbed to the devouring element. One building after another caught and all were burned. Owing to the scarcity of water the work of the firemen was rendered nearly useless. The loss is put at $6,000 partly covered by insurance.

—At the state convention of county commissioners, held at Meadville week before last, resolutions were adopted recommending the passage by the legislature of an act making the office of district attorney a salaried office; an act to pay assessors a uniform rate for actual work done; to repeal the act creating the office of jury commissioner, and place the work on the county commissioners; an act for the uniformity of taxation, with exemptions only as provided in section nine of the constitution; to substitute the act of 1893 for the law requiring the assessors to make return of births and deaths.

—One of the queerest freaks of nature ever heard of is a little dog owned by Edward Lindsey who lives at the red school house between Bellefonte and Milesburg. The dog has only two legs instead of four, and not withstanding this queer state of affairs, is as healthy an animal as one could find anywhere. The dog is about four weeks old, and is perfectly developed otherwise. The shoulder blades are perfectly formed and the marks can plainly be seen where the legs should be. It romps and plays with the other little dogs and does not seem to have any trouble in moving around.—Bellefonte Daily News.

—William Martz, of New Germany, Cambria county, was in the city this morning. Mr. Martz was endeavoring to find Adam Underbaker, a German peddler, who 18 years ago adopted his niece, Mary Martz, then an infant child. He has not seen his niece for 18 years, but succeeded in locating her to-day. Her mother is dead and she and two sisters and a brother were left homeless. The other sisters are now married, one living in Philadelphia and the other in Allegheny City. Her brother resides in Gallitzin and the other sister, Mary, has not been seen or heard from for over 15 years.—Greensburg Press.

—The forty miners employed in the Dunlo Coal Company's mine, at Dunlo, who went out at the time of the strike, were not permitted to return to work when they wanted to, and the drift is still idle. The contracts which were being filled at that bank were transferred to the company's mine at Conemaugh. Some of the Dunlo colliers have left to look for work elsewhere.

A sewing machine sharp has been traveling around in Cambria township visiting all who could be gulled by him. His method of operation is to visit a house and on pretext of looking at the sewing machine, examines it, carefully turning around the wheel, examining the shuttle, etc. He wishes a little carbon oil and while the woman of the house is after the oil he substitutes a broken part that he carries with him for the same part that belongs to the machine and when the woman returns he shows her what is wrong with the machine and proposes to fix it—which he does by putting in the original piece and charges from $1 to $3 for the job.

—John S. Wright, of Wrightsville, Clearfield county, was tried in the United States district court at Pittsburg on Monday on a charge of passing counterfeit money, and was acquitted, though Judge Buffington did not think the verdict in accordance with the evidence, and gave Wright a lecture before discharging him. His brother, B. F. Wright, was to be put on trial this week for making counterfeit money. He is accused of turning it out by the wholesale. Charles B. States, of Flora, Indiana county, was tried on Monday for passing two counterfeit dollars. He redeemed both after he was discovered. The jury acquitted him.

—A disastrous wreck occurred on the P. R. R., near Harrisburg at an early hour last Thursday morning resulting in the death of Daniel Wolfkiel, of Altoona, engineer, and Joseph Haines, of the same city, fireman, and the injury of nine others. A freight train broke down and threw several cars onto the west bound track directly in front of the southwestern express. The engine of the express plunged into the freight cars and was thrown over the embankment into the canal. The locomotive was completely submerged and the engineer and fireman were buried under it. The express was composed of the engine and seven mail cars, and four of the latter caught fire and were entirely consumed.

—On Wednesday night of last week the house of Dr. Davis, of Six Mile Run, Bedford county, was entered by unknown parties, who, after a short search, opened the trunk belonging to the doctor, which was standing in his room, taking therefrom the sum of $3,200 belonging to the school board, of which the doctor was treasurer; also some private funds which had been placed there for safe keeping. A queer complication arises, in as much as Dr. Davis' bond had never been accepted by the school board. Therefore the directors are equally responsible for the sum which included an appropriation received from the state a few days ago of $2,200, which Mr. Davis, his bond unapproved, was not authorized to receive and which the school board are at fault for allowing to be placed in his hands.

Lecture in the M. E Church.

On Friday evening Rev. Chas. L. E. Cartwright will lecture in the M. E. church, in this place, his subject being "Mistakes that Moses Didn't Make." The gentleman has a high reputation as a lecturer and the flattering notices of the press in all parts of the country lead us to believe that it will be a mistake to miss the lecture. The following notice from the West Penn Press is a fair sample notice of the opinions of the editorial fraternity:

Rev. C. L. E. Cartwright, who lectured in the M. E. church last Thursday evening on the subject "Mistakes that Moses Didn't Make," completely captivated the audience by his pleasing eloquence and sound arguments against the follies of infidelity and hypocrisy. Droll humor and tender pathos were cleverly interwoven. The peculiar individuality and personal magnetism of the speaker won for him the favorable opinion of both old and young, many having expressed a desire to hear him lecture again soon on another subject.

A Large Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Endler, who reside on a well-kept farm in Elder township, this county, about a mile from Hastings, enjoy the proud distinction of being the parents of a greater number of children than any other people in Cambria county, if not in the state, says the Spangler Sentinel. To them have been born twenty-three children, twenty-one of whom are living, two sons having died about two years ago with typhoid fever. No twins or triplets have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Endler, and they are not past fifty years of age. They enjoy excellent health and hope and expect to spend many years yet with their numerous progeny.

How to Do It.

If a voter wishes to vote a straight ticket (as every true Democrat intends doing) he will simply mark an x in the circle at the top of the column of his party ticket, fold his ballot and hand it to the inspector; he will do the rest.

If he desires to split his ticket, (which every honest, self respecting Republican should do) he must put no mark in the circle at the top of either column, but must place an x in the little square opposite each name for which he desires to vote. That's the whole business in a nut shell.

Unquestionably Correct.

The Gosling, in discussing the merits of the Republican candidates in this county, makes the following statement about the Republican candidate for prothonotary, which we honestly believe is correct:

"Mr. Samuel W. Davis, of Ebensburg, is a man who has long been before the people of this county in various clerical capacities, and who was at one time a county commissioner."

About Public Highways.

One of the mistaken notions of a majority of persons is that certain things belong to the public, such as the fruit of trees by the roadside and berries on bushes not closed by fences. There is also but a vague idea of what the rights of the public are as to the occupancy of the streets or roads. In a case before the Butler courts recently Judge Greer's charge to the jury contains some information which makes interesting reading.

The case before his honor was the obstruction of public roads and streets. The defendant was indicted for maintaining a nuisance by the obstruction of a public road, a part of which he used for the purpose of hewing timbers. Counsel for the defense urged that so long as there was any room left for a team to pass, the use of a portion of the highway by an unauthorized person for his own private purpose, did not amount to a nuisance. The court ruled otherwise. His honor, in his charge to the jury, said the public has the right to the free and unobstructed passage over the road, and if impeded, the township is liable for any damage that may result. For all other purposes the land to the middle of the road belongs to the owners of the abutting property on each side. No other person can lawfully use this for his own purposes or appropriate to his own use any grass, fruit or other crop that grows thereon. But in case of accident, as the breaking of a wagon, a man may pile his load by the wayside and leave it there for a reasonable time, until he can remove it. Incidentally, his honor referred to the use and obstruction of the streets in town, by fakirs, venders of medicines or other goods. The rights of the property owner, he said, are the same in town as in the country. The public has a right to free passage, but the title of the owner of abutting property extends to the middle of the road. A license from the burgess or town council to occupy this property for business purposes, is of legal effect and any person so occupying it may be arrested and indicted for trespass or nuisance. His license will afford him no protection against prosecution and punishment for such unlawful act. A property owner has not only the right of possession in his land, but the public to his premises. Corner lots are the most valuable for business purposes, because they give the public better access, and the owner of such lots owns a larger extent of street, to the full benefit of which he is entitled, and of which he may not lawfully be dispossessed by intruders.

Sales by the Sheriff.

Maurice Clark's property on Market street, First ward, Johnstown, the sale of which was postponed at Johnstown on Saturday, was purchased by M. B. Stephens for $300.

The same Association, plaintiff, bought the interest of Rosalia and Simon Gutwald in a lot in Elder township, paying therefor $30.

The same Association, plaintiff, bought, for $50, the interest of I. J. Weakland in a forty-acre tract of land in Carroll township.

DENTISTRY.

Do you know we are taking out teeth every day without one particle of pain?

Well, we are doing this very thing with "Odontunder," the only local anaesthetic that has stood the test and to-day it is the only one that is used universally by dentists who are up to date in their calling.

The price for "Odontunder" when painless is 50 cents, but if you experience the least pain, we only charge you the usual price, 25 cents.

How about those teeth that need filling? Well, you say they don't ache. That's just the reason why you should have them filled now. After they have ached once you will probably have to have the nerve killed and the tooth treated if you are desirious of saving it. I only charge 50 cents for amalgum fillings and from $1.00 up for gold fillings. These are hard-time prices but they go just the same. Why procrastinate?—that's a big word but it's a good one right here because procrastination means to the patient loss of sleep, neuralgia, ear-ache, tooth-ache and goodness knows what else. We know of a good many young ladies of our acquaintance who would have been married long ago if it hadn't been for those horrid-looking teeth. Remember, to every patient having teeth filled I give a box of Dr. Richards' tooth powder and full instructions for the care of the teeth. On the 13th of each month I will extract teeth free of charge. You say why on the 13th. Well, now, that's my business. All you have to do is to come. Remember I won't take out your good teeth, because I don't believe in it. Then you say suppose the 13th falls on Sunday. Come right along and we will be only too glad to relieve you of the offending member.

NEGRO ROASTED.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

VICTIM'S HUSBAND FIRED FAGOTS.

The Negro Begged For Mercy, But the Mad Mob Tortured Him In Reply—His Last Prayer on Earth Could Be Heard For Several Squares—Fifty Minutes of Excruciating Agony Before Death Released the Suffering Victim of a Mob's Vengeance—He Confessed His Crime When Captured—The Officers Overpowered—An Appeal to the Governor For Help Arrived Too Late—The Fiend Horribly Assaulted, Murdered and Mutilated a White Woman.

TYLER, Tex., Oct. 30.—The negro who so brutally murdered Mrs. Bell, who was captured three miles from Kilgore, has been burned at the stake. He offered no resistance when captured. Soon after the officers had him handcuffed a mob of some 300 men, heavily armed, arrived on the scene and demanded immediate possession of the prisoner, which was readily given. The mob then went to the scene of the murder. The crowd continued to gather at the scene of the horrible crime until nearly 2,000 citizens of Tyler and vicinity were there. A few moments before the fiend was brought at the place a meeting was held and a committee was appointed to investigate his identity. Witnesses were summoned and closely interrogated. The result was a thorough identification. In a few moments the officer approached from over the hill, followed by 300 determined, well-armed men. When near the scene the officers were overpowered and disarmed and the negro, Henry Hilliard, brought before the committee. He made a full confession, in substance as follows:

"I was coming down the road and saw Mrs. Bell in the road. She was scared of me, and I knew that if I passed her she would say I tried to rape her, and I concluded that I would rape her and then kill her. I cut her throat and cut her in another place and left."

He wrote a note to his wife and gave it to the sheriff. It read as follows: "I am arrested by 'Wig' Smith. You know what they will do with me. If I don't see you any more, good bye."

After his open confession and the thorough identity, a vote was taken as to the mode of punishment. It was unanimously agreed to burn him and it was agreed that he should suffer his penalty on the public square. The march was then made to Tyler and when the head of the line entered the main plaza no less than 7,000 people were assembled.

Large crowds of ladies and children were congregated on the awnings surrounding the public plaza. Wagons, carriages, trees and buildings were converted into grand stands and were thronged.

A scaffold was erected in the center of the square. Wagons laden with kindling wood, coal oil and straw were driven to the scene and placed in position. The negro was then given an opportunity to speak, but his words were inaudible, but when he offered up his last prayer on earth he could be heard for several blocks. He was then lashed to the iron rail that extended through the platform. Mr. Bell, the husband of the murdered lady, applied the match and the flames shot upward, enveloping the brute in sheets of fire. He begged for mercy and it was meted out to him just as he was merciful to the pure, innocent woman whose soul he had sent to heaven.

It was determined to burn him at once, but the fire was frequently quenched, and after the last piece of wood was burned, in a few moments the fire was started again. From the time the match was applied until his death was exactly 50 minutes.

The I. & G. N. southbound train was crowded with people from the towns north. Hundreds of negroes witnessed the execution, and representative negroes expressed their indorsement of the punishment. The officers were powerless and the sheriff wired the governor, but his message was too late. All business houses and factories closed and the big Cotton Belt shops were deserted.

A special from Kilgore tells this story of the crime: Mrs. Bell, who had been visiting her mother a short distance from home, was on her return when met by the negro. What occurred can only be told by the evidence given by the dead body of the lady. The ground showed that she had struggled for her honor, and the condition of the body told of the cruelty that has only been equaled by "Jack the Ripper." After outraging the body the negro deliberately cut her throat, and then, taking his knife, ripped up her body. A posse was quickly organized, led by Deputy Smith of Tyler, who, with lanterns in hand and aided by a hound, tracked the negro to within four miles of this place, where they found him fast asleep in a cotton pen. The negro's clothing was still covered with blood, which he had attempted to wash out.

FOUGHT FOR ADMISSION.

A Wild Rush to Hear the Closing Arguments In Durrant's Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—The close of the arguments for the defense in the trial of Theodore Durrant was marked by the greatest crowd that ever fought for admission to a murder trial in this city. Judge, jury, court officers and attorneys struggled for nearly an hour in a surging throng of men and women who crowded through the corridors leading to the courtroom. The sheriff and his deputies were not able to control the mob, and a requisition was made on the chief of police for a squad of 30 men. Ropes were stretched across the corridors and an effort made to keep the people back, but the ropes were brushed aside as easily as pieces of twine might have been. The crowd was finally dispersed without the necessity of making any arrests.

General Dickinson finished his argument for the defense. The only significant feature of his remarks was the suggestion that Miss Lamont was probably murdered by two men instead of one.

Attorney Deuprey said Durrant was an innocent victim of circumstances and begged the jury to right the great wrong that had already been done the prisoner by acquitting him as speedily as possible. No evidence had been introduced which he believed established the fact that Durrant strangled Miss Lamont. The same amount of energy directed towards casting suspicion upon the Rev. John George Gibson, he believed, would have developed as strong a case against the clergyman. At the same time, Mr. Deuprey expresses the belief that the minister had nothing to do with the murder.

THE VENEZUELAN AFFAIR.

An Answer From Salisbury May Be Given Soon or May Be Delayed.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The United States ambassador, the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, who has been visiting Sir John Pender, will return to town tomorrow and will start for Scotland next week. He will probably be away from London during most of the month of November.

The stories about Mr. Bayard delaying his departure owing to his expecting the Marquis of Salisbury's reply to the note of the United States regarding Venezuela are unfounded. It is generally believed that the premier is awaiting the arrival here of Sir Charles Cameron Lees, the governor of British Guiana, who has been called home, and the return to town of the secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, before replying to the American note. But it is probable that there is some significance in the action of the Marquis of Salisbury in postponing his regular reception to the members of the diplomatic corps, which was to have taken place today, and it is considered likely that the reply will be sent before the postponed reception is held.

RIOT VICTIMS BURIED.

A Special Grand Jury at Tiffin Investigating the Riot.

TIFFIN, O., Oct. 30.—The funerals of Christian Matz and Henry Mutchler, who were shot down by the guards while storming the county jail last Sunday morning, were not attended with excitement.

The special grand jury will certainly indict Leander J. Martin, alias Miller, the murderer of City Marshal August Schultz, and the cause of all this trouble, who is now safely imprisoned in the Sandusky jail. The jury will also take cognizance of the riot of Sunday morning.

The ring-leaders of the mob are in hiding. Michael Schimidutz and Marion Lynch are supposed to be concealed in the city. Victor Vidoni, the young Italian, whose impassioned harangue after bloody repulse came so near rallying the rioters, has left the county with the announcement that he would not stop before reaching sunny Italy.

WRECKED BY ESCAPING GAS.

Thirteen Persons Killed In an Explosion on the Strand, London.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—An explosion supposed to have been caused by escaping gas has wrecked a house, reducing it to atoms, on Church court, Strand. Thirteen persons were killed and many were injured by the collapse of the house. The building consisted of three floors and its tenants were mostly Covent Garden market porters. A deafening report was suddenly heard and then the house collapsed as if made of cards, causing much excitement in the neighborhood.

Two firemen, while searching in the burning embers in an effort to extricate the victims were buried beneath the upper story of an adjoining house which suddenly collapsed. One of the unfortunate firemen was resuscitated in an injured condition, but the other still remains buried in the ruins.

Findlay Preacher Sues For Slander.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 30.—Rev. J. A. Witham of Findlay, O., has begun suit for slander in the United States court against Rev. H. D. F. Gaffin of Sunfield, Mich., and claims $5,000 damages. The suit is based on a letter written by Gaffin to Mary B. Mullen of Lindsey, O., in which it was charged that Witham was "unlearned, a very poor scholar, yet capable of deceiving as many as most men on earth." The letter further charged him with immoral conduct of a gross nature, for which he was expelled from the conference.

The request has been complied with.

HOLMES BACKS DOWN.

He Gives Up and Sends For His Lawyers.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE IS GIVEN.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—It has become apparent that the picturesque and startling features of H. H. Holmes' career are not to be confined to his destructive wanderings over the American continent, for with each successive day comes something still more strange and unexpected.

After fighting tooth and nail single-handed against the tremendous machinery of the commonwealth and the apparently complete chain of evidence which has been forged around him, he has thrown up his hands and sent for his lawyers, Messrs. Shoemaker and Rotan. Then he told the court what he had done, and a reluctant consent to their continuing with the defense was given. There was an impression that this was but another piece of by-play following Holmes' personal failure to catch the sympathy of the court and jury by making himself out a much-wronged man, forced to fight alone what may prove to be his last battle, in spite of his ignorance of the technicalities of the law and his alleged physical infirmity.

Holmes privately said that the preparation of his case in his cell had kept him up until 4 o'clock in the morning, and then he was roused from bed two hours later. In addition to this, he had not eaten anything from the night before until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. It was after making this statement that he sent for his counsel. Up to that time there had been a general impression that human nature could not stand the terrible ordeal which he had set for himself, and that if he had persisted in going on with his own case there would be a breakdown before long.

All day, as he sat in the dock, the eyes of the man he is charged with murdering gazed at him from a large crayon portrait placed upright on the district attorney's desk, in full view of the entire court. Next to this was an equally large-sized picture of the daughter, Alice, whose death is also laid on his shoulders. But Holmes did not seem to be affected. His stolid demeanor never deserted him for an instant.

Holmes was allowed another interview with his wife besides the one arranged for by District Attorney Graham.

Jeannette Pitezel, Dessa, the daughter of the dead man, was the first witness called. She is a slender, pale girl of about 17, and was neatly attired in dark gray. She was called merely to identify several large crayons of her father, which she did.

Eugene Smith, who found Pitezel's body in the Callowhill street house on Sept. 4, 1894, then told a detailed story of his discovery, which has been already fully published. He had seen Holmes at Pitezel's house during his lifetime. The witness was present when the corpse of Pitezel was exhumed from the potter's field, and was there first introduced to Holmes. Lawyer Howe of St. Louis, Alice Pitezel, the young daughter, and the insurance officers were there. The body was recognized by the witness as Pitezel's. Holmes offered $30 to have the corpse cremated. Holmes told the insurance people of the marks of identification.

Dr. William J. Scott, who examined Pitezel's body after it was discovered, explained the situation of the room and the arrangement of the windows so that the sun's rays should fall upon the corpse and hasten decomposition, together with the position of the burns on the body, the broken jar, pipe, etc. He verified the district attorney's assertion that the pipe could not have fallen from the lips of Pitezel to the place where it was found, and that the boy fell over the cliffs along the Sorrente road, on the bay of Naples, while he himself was absent for a few moments.

THEY MAY THWART CLARK.

Sports Will Have Fitz Arrested, Then Released So He Can Fight.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 30.—The moves made on the pugilistic checkerboard are full of greater interest than has developed at any time since Hot Springs was selected as a battleground by the managers of the big fight. As the time for the meeting of the two gladiators has drawn so near that nothing short of strategem and extreme measures would prevent it, Governor Clark and Attorney General Kinsworthy put their heads together and decided to use both by virtually "kidnapping" Fitzsimmons before he reached Hot Springs and carrying him to Little Rock, where he would be so tightly bound by bonds to keep the peace that he would be glad to get out of the state without ever seeing Corbett. Their plans have been thwarted at every move, however. Corbett, Brady, Joe Vendig and Secretary Wheelock of the Florida Athletic club are all under arrest here and in the hands of the local authorities, hence the attorney general cannot get service on them now and take them from this county for trial, as he contemplated doing.

Officers from this county armed with warrants for Julian and Fitzsimmons' arrest are now, doubtless, with that twain somewhere in Texas piloting them toward Arkansas. As soon as the train crosses the line into Arkansas the warrants will be served upon them and they will be prisoners of Garland county officers, and when Governor Clark and the sheriff at Texarkana proceeds to serve his papers he will find that his warrants are no good.

The governor has been tripped, and the only thing that remains now for him to do to stop the fight is by military interference, and it is not believed he will do that, as he is somewhat handicapped on that score. The fight is almost sure to occur between now and November 2.

PENSION LIST GROWS.

MODEST DEMANDS OF SOLDIERS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Commissioner William L. Lochren of the pension office, in his annual report, makes several pointed suggestions. Under the head "Patriotism and Pensions," he says:

"Those men who enlisted early and fought the battles of the war were not moved by mercenary considerations, and unless actually disabled did not show the haste in applying for pensions manifested by those who enlisted near the close of the war for large bounties, and did little actual service, and who are now the noisiest in clamoring for more pensions. As compared with this latter class, the real soldiers of the war have been modest in preferring claims for pensions."

The commissioner says that many disreputable and incompetent men are engaged as pension attorneys, and suggests that none but reputable members of the bar be allowed to practice in pension cases. Dishonest attorneys have given much trouble by systematic criminal and fraudulent practices. Pension payments, the commissioner says, bring large amounts of money into communities, and the fear that the conviction of these attorneys would lessen the influx of money has manifested itself in popular rancor against the special examiners whose investigations secured the conviction of criminals. The special examination division will not require as much money as in the past, for the reason that vigorous prosecution of frauds and crimes has discouraged and measurably stopped frauds. Two hundred and ninety-four were convicted during the year.

The death of many witnesses and the age of claimants has made it quite difficult in many cases lately to obtain proof sufficient for the granting of pensions.

The report shows that the number of pensioners June 30, 1894, was 969,544; new pensioners added during the year, 39,185; dropped pensioners restored, 4,206; deaths during the year, 29,816; dropped for other causes, 14,575; making a net increase of pensioners during the year of 860. Pension claims allowed during the year, 39,185; rejected, 103,555; cases pending, 552,210.

The appropriation for the year was $150,000,000, and there was paid during the year $138,807,337. The estimate for pensions for 1897 are $140,000,000 for pension payments; $800,000 for surgeons' fees and $450,000 for clerk hire at pension agencies, and about $200,000 for other expenses.

The A. R. U. After Hill.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 30.—The indications are that James J. Hill will be compelled to accede the demands to be made on him by the American Railway union or have visited upon the Great Northern railroad an extensive strike. There is now at Devil's Lake, N. D., a committee of eight revising the schedules of submission to President Hill. The main ground for contention is that a low paid man with a grievance is entitled to as much consideration as a high paid man without a grievance. It is also claimed that Mr. Hill, ever since the union won the great strike in 1894, has been systematically violating the agreement made at that time.

Two Indians' Terrible Crime.

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 30.—Chief Deputy United States Marshal Vinson has returned here from the Okanagon reservation, bringing news of a most horrible crime perpetrated by two Indians named Chukwaskie and Peickelpetsy. She was found after two days and revived.

To Prepare the Waller Demand.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Several letters have been received at the state department from Ambassador Eustis, and there is every reason to believe that the record in the Waller case was among them. Indicted Police Officials Exonerated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Justice Ingraham, in the court of oyer and terminer, has dismissed the indictments against ex-Police Captains Doherty and Donohue and ex-Sergeant McKenna. The action was in conformity with a motion made by counsel for the defendants and endorsed by the district attorney. This decision of Justice Ingraham means, in all probability, that the cases against many of the indicted police officials will be abandoned.

Laurel Ave., San Francisco, May 18, 1892.

"Dear friend of women:

"When my baby was born, five years ago, I got up in six days. Far too soon. Result: falling of the womb. Ever since I've been miserable.

"I tried everything: doctors, medicines, apparatus; but grew worse.

"I could hardly stand; and walking without support was impossible.

"At last I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it. The effect was astonishing. Since I took the first bottle my womb has not troubled me, and, thanks only to you, I am now well. Every suffering woman should know how reliable your compound is. It is a sure cure."
